Fill in the gaps with the correct adjective:

(Use each word only once: vindictive, aloof, eccentric, resilient, resourceful, conscientious, nonchalant, unflappable)

1. Even after several setbacks, she remained _____ and quickly bounced back with new energy.
2. He can be a bit _____; last week he wore mismatched shoes to an important meeting and didn't even notice.
3. The manager is extremely _____ — she always double-checks her work and pays attention to every detail
4. Despite the chaos in the office, he stayed completely _____ and calmly solved the problems one by one.
5. Some colleagues find her rather _____; she keeps her distance and rarely joins in casual conversations.
6. Don't be fooled by his _____ attitude; he actually cares a lot but prefers to hide it behind a relaxed smile.
7. She's incredibly _____ — even with limited resources, she always finds a clever way to get the job done.
8. After the argument, he became quite _____, determined to get revenge rather than move on.

2. Match the adjectives in the left column with their correct antonyms in the right column. Write the corresponding letter next to each adjective:

1. A computer geek
2. A good laugh
3. Keep yourself to yourself
4. Spontaneous
5. Unsympathetic / callous
6. Aloof
7. Conscientious

- a) Careless
- b) Outgoing / gregarious
- c) A bore
- d) Friendly / approachable
- e) Technophobe
- f) Sympathetic
- g) Predictable / planned

4. Work in pairs and discuss. Which words or phrases would you use to describe yourself or someone you know?

5. Debate: "The Worst Flatmate"

In groups, decide what type of person would be the worst flatmate. You should justify your choice using the adjectives.

Example: "I think a moody person would be terrible to live with because you never know what to expect."

America has a loneliness epidemic. Here are 6 steps to address it

There is an epidemic of loneliness in the United States and lacking connection can increase the risk for premature death to levels comparable to smoking 15 cigarettes a day, according to a new advisory from the U.S. Surgeon General.

The report released on Tuesday, titled "Our Epidemic of Loneliness and Isolation," finds that even before the COVID-19 pandemic, about half of U.S. adults reported experiencing measurable levels of loneliness.

And it warns that the physical consequences of poor connection can be devastating, including a 29% increased risk of heart disease; a 32% increased risk of stroke; and a 50% increased risk of developing dementia for older adults.

"It's hard to put a price tag, if you will, on the amount of human suffering that people are experiencing right now," Surgeon General Dr. Vivek Murthy told All Things Considered.

"In the last few decades, we've just lived through a dramatic pace of change. We move more, we change jobs more often, we are living with technology that has profoundly changed how we interact with each other and how we talk to each other."

"And you can feel lonely even if you have a lot of people around you, because loneliness is about the quality of your connections."

Across age groups, people are spending less time with each other in person than two decades ago. The advisory reported that this was most pronounced in young people aged 15-24 who had 70% less social interaction with their friends.

Murthy said that many young people now use social media as a replacement for in-person relationships, and this often meant lower-quality connections.

"We also know that for some kids, being online has been a way to find community at a time when many of them have not been able to," he said. "What we need to protect against, though, are the elements of technology, and social media in particular, that seek to maximize the amount of time that our children are spending online at the expense of their in-person interactions."
